1994 Ontario Lees-McRae College

Graduation Jubilation

Dr. Charlotte D'Armond (left), Associate Professor of Performing Arts, lets off some of that "the year is over, post-graduation" steam with senior Jen Moody (Class of '94) (right).

Lees-McRae College is a private, coeducational institution affiliated with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The college was founded in 1900 by the Reverend Edgar Tufts as part of an Appalachian ministry of education and service. This tradition of caring and the College's location in the North Carolina mountains make Lees-McRae unique.

The Beginning of the Schobel Era

After a six month search and consideration of over 120 candidates, Dr. James A. Schobel was tabbed to be Lees-McRae College's eleventh president in the ninety four year existence of the school. Schobel, who recently completed his twentieth year as president of Mayville State University in North Dakota, has "all the characteristics of the president we were seeking," said Lees-McRae Board of Trustees Chairman Dr. Daniel Massie. "Our Presidential Search Committee was thrilled to announce that after months of assessment, study, research, conversation and interviews we have come to a most happy conclusion with the nomination of Dr. James A. Schobel as Lees-McRae's new president. He is a proven college president, administrator, educator, leader and churchman. We are convinced that James Schobel is the right person for this time in the life of Lees-McRae College and will lead us to new heights in the years ahead."

Schobel, an Ohio native, earned his bachelors, masters and doctorate degrees from Ohio University. He has worked in both the public and private education sectors and began his career as a research associate with the Ohio Center for Economic Education at Ohio University. A year later he was named Resident Director and Assistant to the Dean of Residence Life at Ohio University where he also served as the first full-time graduate intern with the President. Schobel later accepted a position at Pittsburg State (KS) where he supervised residence hall programs. Schobel then relocated to Dakota Wesleyan where he was Dean of Students and Assistant Professor of Economics. In 1973 Schobel became the youngest president in the North Dakota system when he took the reins at Mayville State. During his tenure at Mayville State he increased student enrollment, piloted Mayville's involvement in a computer data based management system, initiated a program of institutional advancement that resulted in a ten-fold increase in annual giving, created North Dakota's first satellite teaching network, implemented faculty development grants which more than tripled the number of doctoral degreed faculty and began a summer workshop for exceptional students. His professional activities have included serving as chairman of the Board of Directors for the Northern Plains Consortium composed of both public and private colleges. Upon hearing of the unanimous selection by the Search Committee and confirmation by the Board of Trustees, Schobel stated he was "eager to begin" his duties at Lees-McRae.

Ph.D. Ohio University

ough Schobel didn't officially begin his duties as president of Lees-McRae until early April after being hired in December of the previous year, he greeted students on every visit to campus and maintains an "open door" policy to the student body.

Schobel greeted the students back from the Christmas holidays as the featured speaker during Opening Convocation Ceremonies for the Spring Semester.

to have a second chance in one lifetime to be called to serve and lead a distinguished institution of higher education is both an humbling experience and a great responsibility. Lees-McRae is committed to service and true Christian principles and offers all persons involved in the college's future an unparalleled opportunity to pursue the noblest of all callings — commitment of self to the service of others. In my vision for Lees-McRae and with God's calling for all to go forth and do good works, willing and able students will 'Come to the Mountains' not only to enjoy the beauty and inspiration of one of the nation's most beautiful campus sites, but to discover new and expanded opportunities of one's potential service to his fellow man."

Schobel and his wife Jane are the parents of four children.

Frazier Completes Interim Term as Lees-McRae President

One of the first official duties Lees-McRae College interim president Dr. David Frazier took on was being the featured speaker during Opening Convocation Ceremonies to start the 1993-94 school year. The following are excerpts from his address to students, faculty and staff entitled "Take Pride in LMC."

"I am very pleased to be here with you as your interim president for a brief period of time. Perhaps because I have been familiar with Lees-McRae and have known folk here for 30 years or so, I take exceptional pleasure in serving with you. It is my hope that everyone — every single person — in this auditorium has a special sense of pride in being here. You have a lot about which to be proud.

"You have the tradition and history of the institution about which you can take pride. You should know the Edgar Tufts story of the founding of this institution. You ought to know of the personal sacrifices of the many people who have come before you. You should take pride in the beautiful, inspiring location in which this college is set. I was telling someone on the phone today that I have been on hundreds of campuses, but I've never been on a campus that had more natural beauty than Lees-McRae's. The mountain peaks reaching toward the sky inspire us onward and upward. And we feel closer to nature, to one another and to our maker."

Frazier also mentioned that others, outside of the campus community, also take pride in Lees-McRae. "This institution has the respect of others, others both inside and outside of the community of higher learning. It has respect from the church for its mission and goals, and from major donors who have given millions of dollars to Lees-McRae for you. You should be proud of the leadership of the folks on this campus. These people are committed to you students. They are committed to making this institution the kind of place it should be. They are committed to giving you the best possible Christian higher education, which is important to the mission of this college.

"I don't know if I have seen more loyalty and dedication than among the faculty and staff on this campus.

Dr. S. David Frazier
Interim President
Ph.D. Florida State University

And you should take pride and enjoy the benefit from the sense of community and caring. It is the essence of Lees-McRae.

One student said to me, 'I stayed and graduated because the faculty cared.' And a staff member told me during my first days here that, 'There is an unusual sense of community here.' And I believe you will feel that, you will sense that after you have been here awhile.

"Students, you have the most at stake in Lees-McRae's reputation and future. You will always be a graduate or alum of this school. Today's and tomorrow's reputation will stick with you, so you should try to nurture and enhance the reputation and image of this institution."

Frazier closed by giving a few "random thoughts" to the students upon entering a new academic year. "Most good things do not come easily, or to put it in today's vernacular, 'no pain, no gain.'

"Integrity is the cornerstone of good relationships and the good life. America needs people of integrity and morality. And, early mistakes often mean permanent handicaps. So, in conclusion, these simple thoughts: life is short; death is certain; and God keeps his promises. I wish all of us a happy, successful academic journey and life this semester. God bless."

Performing Arts ENTERTAINMENT

LMC Presents "Madwoman of Chaillot"

The classic french comedy "The Madwoman of Chaillot" hit the stage during the Spring of 1994. Lees-McRae Associate Professor of Performing Arts Dr. Charlotte D'Armond called "Madwoman" "a great opportunity for our students to engage in a marvelous and diverse array of characters."

The play has a kind of fantastic, bigger than life nature to it and the theme we've interwoven into it during rehearsal is:

Nothing is as it seems."

The play was written by Frenchman Jean Giraudoux in 1948.
